

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: 10/10/2017

International Creation Day 2017 Coming Soon To Your Community

The third annual international creation science event takes place November 4th.

Santee, Calif. (10/10/2017): Creation & Earth History Museum, in partnership with The International Association for Creation, will present International Creation Day 2017 on November 4, the event will feature Tom Cantor of Scantibodies Laboratories, Eric Hovind of Creation Today, and Russ Miller of Creation, Evolution & Science Ministries, among many other dynamic speakers and creation science experts.

Creation & Earth History Museum and The International Association for Creation are proud to bring International Creation Day 2017 to Santee, California as well as delivering a live stream around the world for museums, churches, homes, and other venues. International Creation Day 2017 will feature talks from experts, science experiments, live animals, games, prizes, rides, fair food, and free museum admission!

Jayson Payne, Director of Creation & Earth History Museum, says, "The importance of this event is to strengthen the [faith of families] and provide Biblical answers for future generations. Our focus this year is to make sure the kids have a takeaway, we are doing seven new creation stations (sic). We want to make sure they leave with having been encouraged. Our desire is that the future generations know they can completely trust God's Word and that science confirms the Biblical truth. We are here to give the youth answers, gearing the event towards entire families with fun science experiments, interactive speakers, a petting zoo, and free admission to the museum. We look forward to seeing everyone on November 4th!"
